Kent and Its Alumni

Colleges are always interested in their alumni. Especially are they interested in their successes. Chicago-Kent College of Law is no exception in this respect. Many of its alumni have become leaders. The College is especially proud of those alumni who have attained recognition in the legal profession, either before the bar or upon the bench. The recent judicial election in this county again brought honor to many Chicago-Kent men. Of the twenty judges elected to the Superior Court of the County of Cook and State of Illinois, nine, or forty-five per cent of the total, are graduates of Chicago-Kent College of Law.

It is significant that these leaders of the bar began their careers combining both work and study in order that they might reach the position that they occupy today. It is a tribute not only to the advantages offered by Chicago-Kent College of Law, but also to the ambition and stamina of these men. Their record and perseverance should be a constant example and support to the ambitious youth of today.

Needless to say, all the judges-elect have our best wishes, but especially do we cheer those who are graduates of Chicago-Kent College of Law.

Gifts to the Library

Mr. Holman D. Pettibone, '14, has presented to the College Library a large number of books, among which are included American Bar Association and Illinois State Bar Association Reports, Illinois Session Laws, Digests, a miscellaneous lot of text books and various directories of interest to the legal profession.

Dr. Mary Elizabeth Davenport, '21, has again made the college library the recipient of a valuable work on Legal Medicine. The work is by Allan McLane Hamilton, M. D. and Lawrence Godkin, Esq.

These gifts to the library are gratefully accepted and appreciated by the College, and if more of the alumni realized the opportunity which an enlarged library affords those dependent upon it, there would be many more donations of this nature.

The librarian will be glad to give information as to the present library needs.

Your PledgeIs It Paid in Full?

Messrs. Frank J. Lexa, '24, and Carl E. Swanson, '25, have recently sent in remittances to pay the balance due upon their pledges to the building fund of the College. Their action is very much appreciated by the officers and faculty of the College.
